Volume 23

Foreword

Educational muscles are not built in a day or months. They are the products of years of study and play, companionship and solitude, triumphs and defeats, smiles and tears.

Through this yearbook may the pupils of Spring Hill be reminded of moments of accomplishment: a geometry problem solved, a seam sewed straight, an experiment successfully made, a report given with enjoyment, a clean victory in sports, an honor earned, or the after-game congregation of students at the local store to discuss events of the day.

Above all else, may each recognize the forces that are working to develop a good citizen through study, play, and teamwork.

Dear Lord,
Day, you're one in a million. You are a true friend. I feel that I can really treasure forever. I hope that you will always have the best. I subscribe myself "Day" Dear God Bless you.

Fifty miles is the average route for the four bus drivers at Spring Hill, with each trip requiring from forty-five minutes to an hour. Buses transport 250 of the 310 pupils. Seating capacity ranges from a small thirteen passenger bus to a large seventy-two passenger model acquired this year. In addition to these buses the school transportation fleet consists of two auxiliary buses, a driver training car, and an army surplus car.

In addition to strengthening the educational muscles, the juniors work hard at various projects. Each week during football season the class is busy making and selling ribbons. They also work in the concession stands at the Junior High football games. During homecoming week the juniors sell mums and boutonnieres for the homecoming game.

After football season the juniors take over in the basketball concession stands. All proceeds from these various projects go toward the expenses of the Junior-Senior Banquet. At the end of the year any money left in the treasury is applied on the trip at the end of their senior year.

Many of the juniors have extracurricular activities. They participate in band, football, basketball, baseball, and track. The junior class furnishes three majorettes for the band and two cheerleaders.

Sophomores polish their social muscles and grow in grace. They feel especially knowledgeable because they are not green freshmen. They gain experience and knowledge through activities at school. They are valuable members of band, football, basketball, baseball, and track. They also furnish two majorettes and two cheerleaders.

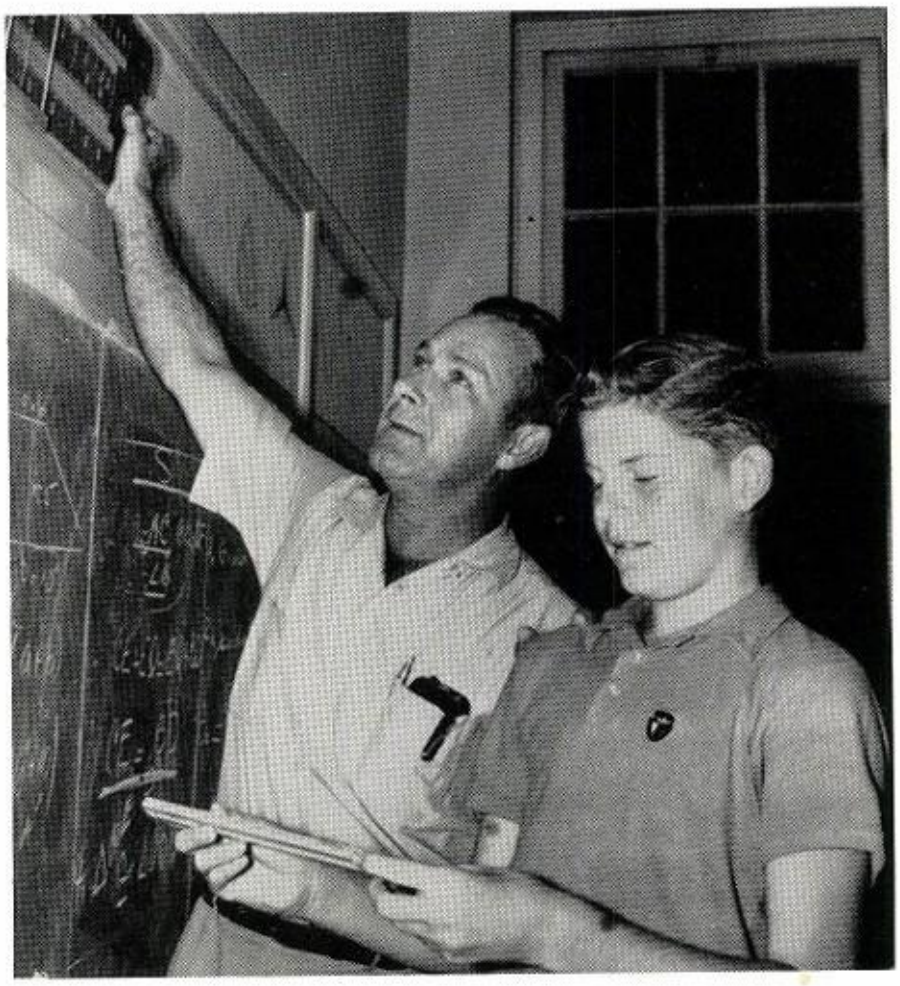
Freshmen enter high school with high hopes and some trepidation. Their enthusiasm is infectious and in spite of rebuffs, condescending looks, and harrassment by seniors, they usually fare well during the year. They participate in sports, and band, perform on Freshman Day, and sometimes really enjoy acquiring knowledge. At the end of the year most of them advance to the sophomore class, but a few of the slothful remain in the green state of freshmen.



Coach Ruggles instructs Larry Castleberry in using a slide rule.

Farewell

For the seniors of 1963, first stage of developing educational muscles is completed. Students, especially seniors, look back upon the East Mountain football games, high school and senior picnics, happy greetings in the hall, the February snow, winning a particular basketball game, struggling through examinations, dreaming of the future, welcoming new classmates, water skiing, and our parties.

We can look back on our failures and disappointments, our bitter moments and happy ones, and always we will remember that in our deepest troubles we always gathered our forces and dreamed again of great things.
